

Barks N Bits Bella & Miss Maybelline

with our favorite Jack Russel Terrier... and introducing her new sidekick...

I Can't Believe I'm Saying This.....

But, I must admit that "Miss Maybelline" has grown on me. Maybe I'm getting softer with age, maybe she is irresistible, maybe she wore me down. Whatever the case, she has won me over and I....I actually like her.

I mean, I admit, she is quite noisy and she does have A LOT of energy, but she also looks up to me. It's kind of flattering and nice to have a youngster that follows me around and tries to imitate what I do.

She pretty much is my shadow around the farm. Once the lady that lives here lets us outside and helps Miss Maybelline down the big steps, the little cutie is hot on my heels for most of the day. She does get distracted easily and takes out after Freckles and Duke once in a while, but I think they sometimes frighten her because they are so much bigger. Although, when they are snoozing, she thinks it is funny to run circles around them and bark. And, yes, I think it's funny too!

Honestly, she reminds me a lot of myself when I was a pup. (Other than the long ears, long tail and long body....) She has a mind of her own and isn't afraid to speak her mind. I respect that.

So...in honor of my new little "sidekick," I have included some pretty cute pictures of our little ball of energy. I figured it was only fitting that we include a portion of a "portfolio." I mean, her name is Maybelline!

You have to admit, she is a cute little booger. And check out those ears! They definitely have a mind of their own.

Until next month, I'll be passing along some wisdom to my new little friend on a daily basis.....

Bella
