I Got My Vacation After All

I think the lady of the house felt a little guilty leaving us here last month. Remember, I told you she was gone and we were all happy to see her when she got home? Well, we all needed a vacation after that!

Time for the lake! A well deserved vacation for yours truly, I must say. I included a few pictures of me and my friend, Maybelline, enjoying some sunshine. I think Miss Maybelline liked the lake. She didn't whine at all on the boat (like she tends to do most of the time everywhere else.....she's a little needy.) She even went swimming in her cute little life vest like mine. She can doggie paddle pretty well for a beginner.

I did get a chuckle out of her enjoying the boat ride. She does have some ears, you know! Boy, were they blowing in the wind! I have to admit it was pretty cute, but I'm glad I don't have that problem.

We had a great time chasing butterflies and even a few cats. I felt kind of bad about the incident with Freckles last year, so I didn't take Miss Maybelline on any crazy chases over any cliffs. She wandered off enough on her own to keep the people busy.

Needless to say, the family enjoyed getting away together and we left Freckles and Duke at home this time to watch over the farm.

I did have a chance to do a little research this past month. I found out that there really are doctors that do plastic surgery on pets.... google it.....unbelievable, that's all I'll say about that.

I also found out who "Rosie the Riveter" was - as well as Winston Churchill. (You should already know...but if you don't, you may want to google them too.)

Lastly, I checked into the reality TV. I think I'll just write a book. What do you think?

Until next month,
I'm loving google!!!
