Rabbits Baskets of Eggs & Joy

Have you ever heard of a rabbit that lays eggs? Well, I'm not sure if this rabbit I keep hearing about is actually laying the eggs, but I hear that this peculiar rabbit delivers them (and other goodies - including jellybeans) to kids (and some dogs - yours truly) in baskets on Easter morning.

I'm not sure if I am buying into it - sounds a lot like the chubby fella in the red suit that brings presents at Christmas. I'll leave it up to you to decide where the goodies come from.

I am looking forward to seeing what is in the basket for me should it arrive again this year. (Yes, that's right, AGAIN.) I have received a basket with goodies in it each Easter for the past several years....I just had never heard the rumor about the rabbit. Makes me wonder. If it's true, what does the rabbit have to gain from these "deposits?" Could it be a trap? Ya never know, those rabbits are sneaky. I've watched enough Bugs Bunny to know that.

If it is a basket from this frivolous rabbit - what would possess it to leave goodies for the dogs that live here? Honestly, if it is some kind of peace offering - not gonna work, Mr. Bunny. Silly rabbit, treats are for kids...and dogs ALWAYS chase rabbits. It's bred into us - especially Jack Russell dogs....it's what we do.

Needless to say, rabbit or no rabbit, I am still looking forward to Easter morning. It's always a lot of fun to watch the kids that live here find their baskets of goodies. Of course, I find mine way before they find theirs...then I help everyone else. They spend a few minutes deciding which treats to eat first and then they all get dressed up (like most other Sundays around here) and head off to church.

I have only been to the Cowboy Church services when we are at the barrel races with the horses, but I always enjoy listening to the people talk and look forward to them.

I know there is something extra special about Easter. (Much more than a rabbit bringing baskets full of eggs and treats.) I have heard the people here talk about it many times. I have read up on it a bit and you can read about it to in several places in the bible. It's a very interesting story and it explains a lot about hope and it makes sense as to why my people seem to be so happy and joyful all of the time. (I like joy.)

I like treats too....until next month....
Waiting on that rabbit,

Bella
